The claim of the administration that it has not gone very fast in making removals from flice is well founded. But the claim that it has been governed in the matter by "a spirit of deci-cacy and farmese" is quite another thing. Re-movais indeed, have not been made as rapidly in the whole range of the service. But the question of expediency comes in A limited amount of zeal in making places for the political friends of the administration, in violation of senate, which would be a necessary consequence, would wreck the administration. The presi-dent, therefore, is feeling his way very cau-liously, turning out of office those who voted democrats right along. After the press by the middle of his term, with a democratic sepate, the faithful of his party could expect to step into all the remainder of the offices at

But there is a possibility that offensive par leans of democratic affinities will not receive more merciful consideration from the secrete than offeneive partisans of republican proctivireview, with their new commissions, before a republican senate. Now President (leveland has taken the ground that men should not be removed from office solely because of their political convictions or party affiliations he has

A CLOSE PARALLEL.

There is a somewhat curious parallel between the causes which led to the late retirement of the datone's ministry and that of Sir Robert Feel, thirty-nine years since. Both leaders were distinguished by advanced and statesmanike distinguished by advanced and statesmanlike views and by a meral courage sufficient to linpress their views upon the legislation of the period Especially true is the parallel as regards the measures put forth to amelicate the confidence the Irish peasantry. In 1846 the auticorn law was rife, and Péel, by that tune a convert to free trade, organized the whole power of his administration in repeal of those unjust en-actments. The terrible famine up Ireland was beginning and the moval effect of that dread calamity served to carry through that mean representation of minety to rescue the unfortunate peasants from maintenest as sation. The ungency of the times procured for it eact of repeal a majority of minety three in the commons. This was the first important move towards free trade, which has since taken firm root in highand. But scarcely had this great measure been passed when the Peel immsay fell, having altempted to pass a coverrom act for the suppression of outrages in fredam, which was defeated by a majority of sevent three most inverspetedly. Their defeat was brought about by a temporary condition of whige, protectionists and Irish Catholic members. Of all the inhabitants of this care they the whemselves into the hands of his enemies, and through a concatenation of circumstances similar in all respects to tross we have observed of late, overthrew an a liminstration one of whose characteristics was a particular regard for the cause of humanity and liberty. In McKarthy's History of Our Own Live the story of the fall of the Feel ministry in a few days. Both statesmen had carried through the great measures of their points. The opposition of the industrial in the distance of the cladstone ministry in a few days. Both statesmen had carried through the great measures of their points. The opposition of the fall of the Calastone ministry in a few days. Both statesmen had carried through the great measures of their points. The opposition of the process of their points of the process of the result of the process of the criterion of the process of the criterion of the fall of the Calastone ministry in a few days. Both statesmen had carried through the great measures of their points. The opposition of the process of their points are considered in the process of the criterion of Arkanasa who say the constraint of the process of the criterion of Arkanasa who say the constraint of the process of the criterion of Arkanasa who say the constraint of the process of the criterion of beginning and the moral effect of that dread ently irreconcilable. But at last, in boti cases, the Irish members, pleading their opposition to coercion acts, threw their votes with the general opponents of the immisters, and the result was their downfail. The Irish papers open'y was their downfail. The hish papers openly least that dadstone was overthrown by the rotes of the Irish members, who turned against him because he was about to revice the coercion policy. To this he was moved by disorders in Ireland which it seemed to him demanded stem measures of repression, by proposing these measures he fell at once, as Peel did, under the displeasure of its Irish members, and the result is just what it was when Peel was overthrown. The Irish It was when Peel was overthrown. The Irish, if they are not permitted to govern themselves. nevertheless at times exercise a good deal of in thence upon the government of England Let it can hardly be claimed that the Irish members a ways show an intelligent gratitude to their English friends of the liberal party
